Cayman National launches its Master Series Funds

Cayman National introduces its Master Series funds to potential investors in the Cayman Islands. The Master Series features the choice and flexibility of investing in the Dow Jones Industrial Average Index Fund and the Absolute Return Fund.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average Index Fund is seen to have a moderate risk rating more suitable for the assertive investor. This fund's objective is to track the Dow Jones Industrial Average, a price weighted average of thirty significant stocks traded on the New York Stock Exchange, and is fitting for the confident investor who can appreciate its fluctuating performance. Current holdings within this fund include Proctor and Gamble Co., 3M Co., Caterpillar Inc., American Express and Johnson & Johnson, to name a few in the top ten.

A more conservative investor may prefer the Absolute Return Fund. The Absolute Return Fund operates under the premise of making investments into several funds with established performance. These funds typically consist of hedge funds, where the investment manager, may for example, make use of two or more securities that are likely to move in opposition to each other. This strategy is intended to diminish the risk that would exist if only one of the securities was held. The Absolute Return Fund's allocation of assets to each underlying fund will vary depending on the performance of each underlying fund and market conditions.

Investors can move their allocation of resources between the two funds. The Master Series has the potential of assisting investors in building their wealth and meeting their personal financial goals.
